On June 13, 2008, InsWeb Corporation and Mr. Jaimie Pickles entered into a Restrictive Covenants Agreement and General Release of Claims (the Agreement) in connection with Mr. Pickles' resignation as President and Chief Operating Officer. As previously announced, Mr. Pickles' career at InsWeb began in March 1999, heading up InsWeb's sales and client development functions before being named President and COO in April 2007. His resignation is effective on June 30, 2008, and his duties will be assumed by Founder, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Hussein Enan.

Pursuant to the Agreement, for a period of one year Mr. Pickles is prohibited from: (i) owning, managing, operating, controlling, or being connected with, as an employee, director or consultant, a competitor of InsWeb; (ii) assisting any company in developing or implementing a business plan that is substantially similar to InsWeb's business; (iii) soliciting or influencing any current employee or consultant to discontinue or modify his/her relationship with InsWeb; and (iv) disclosing any confidential information or engaging in any act that disrupts or disparages InsWeb's business. During the one-year Noncompetition Period, Mr. Pickles will receive specified cash payments and health and medical benefits. In addition, InsWeb agrees to purchase, at fair market value, InsWeb Corporation common stock upon exercise of specified stock options held by Mr. Pickles. All of the payments and benefits due Mr. Pickles will cease, and previously paid amounts may be subject to repayment, if Mr. Pickles breaches the terms of the Restrictive Covenants Agreement.

Mr. Pickles has also released all past, current and future claims that he may have against InsWeb relating to his employment..
