- Employee questions

US Antitrust Status

As we have noted previously, filings seeking antitrust approval of CommScope's acquisition of Andrew have been made with the US Department of Justice (DOJ) as required under the Hart-Scott-Rodino (HSR) Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976, as amended. Both companies yesterday were notified of a request for additional information (known as a second request) by the DOJ. This second request extends the waiting period imposed by the HSR Act until 30 days after CommScope and Andrew have substantially complied with the second requests, unless that period is extended voluntarily by the parties or terminated sooner by the DOJ. CommScope and Andrew intend to cooperate fully with the DOJ. The companies continue to expect to close the transaction before the end of calendar year 2007.

This request for additional information from the DOJ is a normal part of the regulatory process, said Frank Drendel, chairman and chief executive officer, CommScope. We continue to believe the transaction will be approved in each relevant jurisdiction and plan to work toward a prompt closing of the proposed transaction.

The following answers help explain this step in our merger process:

What is Hart-Scott-Rodino?

HSR is a set of amendments to the antitrust laws of the US, which are designed to provide a mechanism for the routine review of significant mergers so as to ensure that such mergers will not diminish competition. Companies with substantial US business that intend to merge must file notifications with the US antitrust agencies (the Department of Justice and Federal Trade Commission) under the HSR Act. The filing describes the proposed transaction and the parties to it.

What is a second request?

Upon the HSR filing, a 30-day waiting period occurs during which time regulatory agencies may request further information in order to help them assess whether the proposed transaction might violate the antitrust laws of the United States. The submission of a second request to the parties from a regulatory agency, which automatically extends the waiting period, does not mean that the agency opposes the transaction, but only that the agency needs more time and information to assess the matter.

Will the closing date of the acquisition change?

We are working to address the DOJ's questions and believe the transaction will be approved by the DOJ and all necessary authorities in other jurisdictions. We continue to expect to close the transaction by the end of calendar year 2007.

What is the impact of this second request on our integration efforts and the work of the various teams?

The second request likely will delay the work of some of the integration teams, especially those addressing competitive areas, until we are able to secure the necessary antitrust clearances. The integration teams will be notified by the Integration Steering Team (led by Bob Hudzik, Eddie Edwards, and Ted Hally) as to how their work is affected by the second request. During the review period, employees working on integration issues are reminded to preserve all documents relating to the integration process and to consult with Bob, Ted, Eddie or their respective company legal counsel on any questions concerning permissible integration activities.

Will executive leadership of the new CommScope be announced later this month, as previously indicated?

That announcement likely will be delayed until we are further along in the HSR process.

When do we expect to complete the second request process and achieve HSR approval?

Once we have substantially complied with the second request, there is another 30-day waiting period for DOJ to decide whether to challenge the transaction based on the information it has collected. DOJ could terminate the waiting period sooner, or we could voluntarily extend it. If the waiting period expires without a DOJ challenge, the US regulatory review process is over. While a specific date is unknown at this time, we still expect to close the transaction before the end of calendar 2007.

We will provide more detail as soon as we can.

S-4 Filed with SEC

CommScope filed a registration statement on Form S-4 (which included a preliminary prospectus and Andrew's proxy statement) with the US Securities and Exchange Commission on Monday, August 13. The definitive proxy statement/prospectus is expected to be sent to Andrew shareholders shortly after the registration statement is declared effective by the SEC. It is a detailed document that will provide shareholders with the information necessary to evaluate and vote on the proposed merger.
