Dear Mr. McBride:

On or around October 26, 2006 I discovered an SEC filing on Edgar submitted by First Turst/Value Line & Ibbotson Equity Allocation Fund (FVI) which was dated October 23, 2006 which referred to a recent mailing about a special meeting of FVI. The proxy materials associated with that special meeting were not filed on Edgar under FVI and I could not find them on Edgar or the FVI web site. As you recollect, during the summer, FVI had indicated its intent to request shareholder approval for conversion to an Exchange Traded Fund (ETF) around the end of the year. The likely result of such a conversion would be to eliminate most of the discount at which FVI trades.

As a salaried employee of Doliver Capital Advisors (Doliver) responsible for trading closed-end funds, I continued to look for more clarification on the upcoming meeting. On October 30, 2006 I received a proxy in the mail indicating a special meeting of FVI on December 11, 2006 and the intent to convert to an ETF on December 15, 2006. During the trading day on October 30th, the estimated discount of FVI temporarily widened to over 3% and I purchased 6,000 shares of FVI for some recent client accounts domiciled at Dominion Securities. These accounts held no prior FVI positions.

On October 31st, interim trading again indicated that the FVI discount had widened to over 3% and an additional 4,700 shares of FVI were purchased at Raymond James where most of the Doliver managed accounts are domiciled. As is our customary procedure, approximately 20% of any purchase or sale of closed-end funds at Raymond James were allocated to house accounts at the same average daily price as client accounts. Correspondingly, 900 shares of FVI were purchased for my family partnership account at a price of $22.3436 per share on October 31st.

After the market closed on October 31st you and I had a telephonic discussion which concerned a number of topics. Among the topics discussed was the recently received proxy from FVI, the references to Doliver in the proxy materials, and the likelihood and desirability of being able to realize Net Asset Value for client shares in FVI before the end of the year.

In a telephone conversation with other employees of Doliver on November 1, 2006, in a discussion that involved many topics, it was agreed that it should be recommended to clients that they vote in favor of the proposed conversion of FVI to an ETF in a timely fashion. During the trading day, the estimated discount in FVI narrowed and no shares were purchased.

On November 2, 2006 I was routinely checking Edgar filings on positions held by Doliver and discovered, for the first time, a preliminary proxy filed by Ralph Bradshaw opposing the FVI conversion to an ETF. The proxy filing was dated October 30, 2006. A quick reading indicated that Mr. Bradshaw was proposing an alternate slate of Trustees and a rejection of the conversion of FVI to an ETF, promising a better result for shareholders. I immediately called the Doliver offices and suggested that any discussions of FVI with clients or anybody else be suspended until further investigation of the evolving situation.

As you know, I am well acquainted with Mr. Bradshaw and was in business with him some years ago. We see each other occasionally in a social setting, but to the best of my recollection, we have never discussed FVI.

Upon careful reading, Mr. Bradshaw's preliminary proxy promises a better result for shareholders, implying that the shares of FVI may trade at a premium if his trustees are elected. However, he offers no concrete specifics as to how this is likely to be accomplished. It should be noted that Mr. Bradshaw does promise that he will deliver Net Asset Value to shareholders by the middle of next year if FVI fails to move to a premium, and the two closed-end funds that he manages currently trade at substantial premiums. The bottom line is that absent further clarification and disclosure by Mr. Bradshaw, it is not immediately clear to me at this time what would most benefit shareholders, supporting the recommendation of FVI or voting Mr. Bradshaw's proxy.

In order to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest, I believe it appropriate that I refrain from making any recommendations to Doliver clients, the principals at Doliver, or anyone else as to how our clients should vote their shares.

Sincerely,

Ronald G. Olin
