NEWS RELEASE

Enbridge Gas Distribution Receives Decision on Late Payment Penalties

Calgary, Alberta, April 23, 2004 Enbridge Gas Distribution Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Enbridge Inc., announced today that the Supreme Court of Canada has released its decision in the Garland case regarding late payment penalties. The Supreme Court of Canada has determined that Enbridge Gas Distribution will be required to repay a portion of amounts paid to it as late payment penalties from April 1994. The Supreme Court has directed that a lower court determine the amounts payable.

Late payment penalty revenues are included in the Company's estimate of revenues for the year and therefore offset rates charged to customers. Enbridge does not profit from revenues from late payment penalties, which accrue to the benefit of all customers, thereby reducing the cost of providing distribution services. These estimates and resulting rates were approved by the Ontario Energy Board (OEB) each year. For this reason, Enbridge Gas Distribution intends to apply to the OEB in 2005 for recovery of any amounts that result from the Garland action and there is not expected to be any financial impact on the Company.

Mr. Gordon Garland, a customer of Enbridge Gas Distribution (formerly The Consumers' Gas Company Ltd.), commenced an action in 1994, asserting that Enbridge Gas Distribution's late payment penalties were contrary to Canadian federal law and seeking certification of the action as a class action. In December 2001, the Ontario Court of Appeal dismissed Mr. Garland's action. In October 2002 the Supreme Court of Canada granted leave to hear Mr. Garland's appeal, and the appeal was heard by the Supreme Court in October 2003.

Late payment penalties were voluntarily adopted in the late 1970s following review by a task force of Ontario public utilities in consultation with the then Minister of Energy and were seen as a means of providing a balanced measure of protection, not only for the individual customer, but also the broad public interest. They were designed to ensure that prompt paying customers were not disadvantaged by customers who do not pay promptly.

On February 1, 2002, Enbridge Gas Distribution changed its late payment penalty from a one-time five per cent charge to a one-time two per cent charge on current gas charges. These charges were made pursuant to rate orders issued by the Ontario Energy Board.
