Item 8.01 Other Events.

Aflac Incorporated announced today that it has sold its holdings of Greek sovereign debt and reduced its investment exposure to perpetual, or so-called hybrid, securities through two separate transactions.

The company sold its entire holdings of Greek sovereign debt, which totaled $270 million of par value at March 31, 2010.

The company exchanged a perpetual, Upper Tier II security of a European issuer for a higher-rated, fixed maturity, senior debt instrument. In addition, the company further reduced its perpetual Upper Tier II holdings through a privately negotiated transaction with another European issuer. These two transactions lowered the company's exposure to perpetual securities by $725 million of par value, or 8.4% of total perpetual securities at March 31, 2010.
