CB&I and McDermott to Combine

Employee Messaging and Talking Points

Our New Partners

McDermott is a leading provider of integrated engineering, procurement, construction and installation services or EPCI for offshore and subsea field developments worldwide, operating in 20 countries with 12,000 employees. They deliver fixed and floating production facilities, pipelines and subsea systems from concept to commissioning to help energy companies safely produce and transport hydrocarbons.

McDermott's focus on offshore and subsea developments is a natural complement to CB&I's focus on the downstream oil and gas and power industries. Our companies have complementary capabilities and customer relationships, as well as a similar geographic focus.

A Transformative Combination

Combining the world-class expertise, capabilities and experience of McDermott and CB&I will strengthen our financial outlook and expand our business across geographies and end markets. In turn, this will create new opportunities for many employees to be a part of a company that is:

A global leader in onshore and offshore facility construction in the upstream and downstream hydrocarbon and power end markets

Strengthened by scale, diversification, technology and a balanced global portfolio in high-growth markets
More Competitive, More Diverse, More Opportunity

Our combined workforces will form a leading vertically integrated onshore-offshore company, and our level of competitiveness will be hard to match.

The new, combined company will be able to pursue large-scale projects and respond to evolving customer needs by providing them with the most complete energy infrastructure services, while offering our employees continued opportunities for growth in broader areas of our industry.

Uniting our businesses and cultures will also create positive opportunities to achieve the following:

Provide a customer-centric, total solution

Collaborate on end-to-end facility solutions to maximize the value of our customers' assets

Better manage risk through a focus on people, process and vertical integration

Have the scale to compete with any global E&C contractor

Counter market cyclicality through more diverse upstream and downstream offerings

Integrate our engineering, construction and fabrication capabilities

Stronger Financial Profile, Best Path Forward

CB&I's financial outlook has improved recently with the sale of the Capital Services business, the execution of its cost savings program, suspending its quarterly dividend, an improved outlook on new awards and prospects, and several other factors.

CB&I's Supervisory Board and management team have been working together diligently to determine our best path forward to position CB&I for long-term growth and success. While CB&I announced the intent to sell its Technology and former Engineered Products businesses in August to strengthen its balance sheet, after careful consideration, our board and management team ultimately decided to pursue this alternative path. We believe this path will create significant long-term opportunity for shareholders, customers and employees.

The combined company will benefit from an enhanced financial profile primed to drive growth and achieve significant synergies, will have a stronger capital structure and is expected to generate strong free cash flow.

A Positive Future for Employees

While this combination impacts every CB&I employee, it is important to keep in mind that we believe this is the best path forward. In the end, this combination will create a positive future for the company.

The transaction is expected to close in the second quarter of 2018, following customary legal and regulatory requirements and conditions, and shareholder approvals. In the interim, the two companies will operate separately and conduct business as usual. For that reason, please continue to focus on your existing responsibilities.

Many of you will have questions about your future. These are natural and understandable, and CB&I's leadership is committed to sharing as much information with you in as timely a manner as possible.

Our leadership team has spent a considerable amount of time with McDermott's leadership team, and there is alignment in terms of philosophies on employee engagement, empowerment and communication. Following the close of the transaction, McDermott's President and CEO, David Dickson, will lead the combined company. Additionally, our President and CEO, Patrick K. Mullen, will stay with the company for a transition period in order to assist with the integration efforts as we work to ensure the capabilities and synergies of the combined company are maximized. Following the close of the transaction, operational leadership of the combined company will include representatives from both companies.

CB&I's leadership is committed to ensuring that the transaction is as seamless as possible for CB&I's employees. To that end, both CB&I and McDermott will be forming integration planning teams, with Jim Sabin leading the planning efforts for our company before the close of the transaction.

The CB&I family is built around an extremely talented group of employees. Our new partners at McDermott recognize that and they look forward to working with us in creating new opportunities for success as one company.
