HESS DIRECTOR NOMINEES SEND LETTER TO SHAREHOLDERS

WILL OBJECTIVELY OVERSEE CONTINUED VALUE CREATION AT HESS

NEW YORK — May 6, 2013 Hess Corporation (NYSE: HES) (“Hess” or “the Company”) today sent a letter on behalf of the Company’s new, independent director nominees to all of Hess’ shareholders in connection with its 2013 Annual Meeting of Shareholders, to be held on May 16, 2013.

The Board recommends that shareholders vote FOR the election of Hess’ highly qualified independent nominees on the WHITE proxy card.

Included below is the full text of the letter:

Dear Hess Shareholder,

As independent nominees to the Hess Board of Directors, we wanted to share our views as the annual meeting approaches on the important decision you will soon make.

INDEPENDENT, UNCONFLICTED OVERSIGHT

Contrary to suggestions by Elliott in the heat and noise of the proxy fight, none of us were required to support the Hess strategic plan as a precondition for serving on the Hess Board. The Elliott characterization is simply false. And ISS and Glass Lewis are completely wrong to imply anything to the contrary.

We were first approached by an independent search firm to consider serving on the Hess Board, then undertook a thorough evaluation of Hess' transformation strategy, met with senior management and the Company's advisors, and attended Board meetings under observer status. We did our homework. We reviewed the Hess plan and we reviewed the Elliott plan. We reviewed independent research. We came to the conclusion – independently and like the rest of the market – that the best path to creating sustainable value for shareholders was to continue to pursue the transformation plan Hess has outlined to the market.

ELLIOTT'S PLAN DISCREDITED AND BARELY MENTIONED

As the proxy fight has worn on, we find it interesting that the Elliott nominees, who stand to be paid millions of dollars more than we do if elected, have either professed not to have studied the Hess plan (a plan enthusiastically endorsed by the market), or they now endorse the broad outlines of the Hess plan. They barely mention Elliott's initial plan for Hess – which they signed on to – and which has now been discredited by the market. Did they do their homework? Should they have? It appears they didn't, and they should have.

WE OWE NOTHING TO HESS AND NOTHING TO ELLIOTT; WE OWE A DUTY TO ALL HESS SHAREHOLDERS

We owe nothing to Hess and nothing to Elliott, but we do owe a duty to all shareholders to help create and execute the best plans to increase shareholder value year-in and year-out. We believe that the plan Hess is pursuing offers the best opportunity to maximize shareholder value, and we are committed to providing independent oversight of Hess management to ensure its continued execution. When necessary, we will make changes to these strategies to ensure we are delivering the best return to all shareholders.

We have all had successful careers and we have strong reputations in our chosen fields. We would not have put our reputations at risk if we did not believe we can provide independent oversight to create value for all shareholders. We simply do not believe that Elliott's nominees can credibly say they are independent of Elliott, a recent shareholder that designed their unusual pay package. We find it surprising that a proxy advisor would recommend for all of the dissident Elliott nominees, while arguing that any nominee recommended by the nominating and governance committee of a company – a stock exchange requirement – could somehow be rejected by the advisor on a claim of compromised independence.

WE WILL WORK FOR ALL SHAREHOLDERS

Hess' current Board and management team have assembled a portfolio of world-class E&P assets, particularly since the decision in 2010 to substantially increase the acreage position in the Bakken oil shale. It is clear to us that Hess is on the right path in strategically focusing that portfolio, ensuring that it has the appropriate balance of higher-growth, lower-risk assets while at the same time efficiently allocating capital to fund growth and increase returns to shareholders. If elected, we will work for all shareholders to see that there is continued, solid execution of the plan, and that there is a detailed review of all aspects of Hess governance and oversight for the future.

Increasing lasting shareholder value is what drives each of us and, while we believe that the plan proposed by Hess and endorsed by the market is the right one for the current circumstances and is superior to the Elliott break-up plan, we are each committed to the regular re-examination of the Hess plan and the careful study and pursuit of all strategies and options for building value for all shareholders.

Our backgrounds (see attached bios) have prepared us well to oversee continued value creation at Hess. Make no mistake, we will not tolerate backsliding or a loss of focus. We will enforce continued re-evaluation of operational initiatives, capital allocation and strategy. We will work for you and ask that you give us that opportunity. We encourage you to vote the WHITE proxy card today.

Sincerely,

John Krenicki, Kevin Meyers, Fredric Reynolds, William Schrader, Mark Williams
