INCO BOARD OF DIRECTORS RECOMMENDS SHAREHOLDERS REJECT
OPPORTUNISTIC AND INADEQUATE OFFER FROM TECK COMINCO

Board believes friendly acquisition of Falconbridge offers best value to Inco shareholders

Estimated value of average annual pre-tax operating and corporate synergies of Inco-Falconbridge combination increases to U.S. $550 million

Toronto, May 31, 2006 The Board of Directors of Inco Limited has unanimously recommended that shareholders reject the unsolicited offer by Teck Cominco Limited to acquire all of the outstanding shares of Inco. The Board characterized Teck's offer as opportunistic, inadequate and contrary to the interests of Inco shareholders, and strongly reiterated its support for Inco's friendly acquisition of Falconbridge Limited.

Our Board views Teck's offer as an opportunistic and calculated attempt to grab Inco at a bargain basement price when we are focused on completing our Falconbridge transaction, said Inco Chairman and CEO Scott Hand. Teck appears to hope that our board will be constrained by our Falconbridge transaction from exploring alternatives to the transaction in the event it were not completed.

We are confident that Inco shareholders will see through Teck's manoeuvre and reject its inadequate offer, he said.

Inco has some of the most highly prized mining assets in the world. Our shareholders deserve full value for those assets. And our Board is determined to make sure that they get it.

The best way to accomplish that is through the route we've been pursuing - namely, our friendly acquisition of Falconbridge. It clearly remains the alternative with the greatest potential to generate strong shareholder value, whether you are looking short-term, medium-term or long-term, he said.

Teck's unsolicited offer is conditional on Inco terminating the Falconbridge transaction.

In a Director's Circular filed today, Inco's Board outlined a number of compelling reasons why Teck's offer is disadvantageous to Inco shareholders.

When you compare what both companies would bring to the combination Teck is proposing, and especially over the long term, it's clear that most of the power in the Canadian powerhouse they talk about would come from Inco's assets, Mr. Hand said.

We are the company with the great portfolio of properties, the great growth projects and expansions under development, and all the options for further growth down the road. And our strength is in nickel, which we believe has the best long-term fundamentals of any metal going forward, he said.

Teck, by contrast, has declining resources and limited growth prospects. Not surprisingly, they'd very much like to bind their fortunes with Inco to fashion a more inspiring future for their shareholders. But for Inco shareholders, this combination can only dilute their participation in Inco's world-class nickel business at a time when our company is poised to outperform from both a production and a financial perspective, he added.

Furthermore, Teck is only offering Inco shareholders its Class B subordinated voting shares in exchange for Inco shares. This would disenfranchise Inco's shareholders who currently have one share, one vote, Mr. Hand said. Inco's Board has reiterated its strong support for Inco's friendly acquisition of Falconbridge as offering superior value for Inco shareholders compared to the Teck offer.

The Board notes that the synergies offered by the Falconbridge transaction are clearly superior and more tangible than those proposed by Teck. After several months of working together, Inco and Falconbridge operations personnel have now jointly identified the potential to realize estimated average annual pre-tax operating and corporate synergies of approximately U.S. $550 million, an increase of U.S. $200 million from the estimated synergies at the time of the announcement of the Falconbridge transaction.

This increase in the synergies estimate is attributable to developed improvements in the Inco-Falconbridge integration plan and to changes in commodity price assumptions as a result of the improved commodity market outlook since October 2005. Inco believes that it should be able to achieve synergies approaching the average annual pre-tax run rate by approximately 24 months after completion of the Falconbridge Transaction. The net present value of the estimated annual average pre-tax run-rate operating and corporate synergies of U.S. $550 million, using a 7% discount rate, is approximately U.S. $3.5 billion on an after tax basis.

By contrast, combining Inco and Teck offers no apparent operational synergies, given that their respective operations will be geographically dispersed and there is relatively little overlap in metal production.

The large scale synergies that the New Inco will achieve in the Sudbury Basin will require major changes in materials flows as well as long-term commitments and investments. The Board believes that synergies on this scale can only be achieved by combining the assets of Inco and Falconbridge, not through a joint venture as Teck as suggested.

Additionally, the New Inco would have world-leading nickel and copper reserve bases, with an attractive portfolio of long-life, low-cost development properties, and would provide a more attractive asset mix than the group of products represented by the current Teck portfolio.

The test for assessing any merger or acquisition is simple: Does this combination create real value? Mr. Hand said.

However you look at the New Inco, the answer is yes. Our immediate earnings and cash flow will be very impressive. As our integration proceeds, we will generate significant value through the tremendous synergies of our combined operations. And our growth projects in nickel and copper, the two metals with the best fundamentals going forward, plus our excellent portfolio of greenfield and brownfield projects will allow us to continue expanding and strengthening our position as a world-scale mining company in the coming years.

By contrast, where is the value in what Teck is proposing? he said. At the end of the day, it amounts to putting two disparate mid-sized companies together simply for the sake of getting bigger.

We believe Inco shareholders deserve better, he said. We are confident that they will get it when we complete our transaction with Falconbridge and create the New Inco.

Forward-Looking Statements

This press release contains, among other things, forward-looking information (as defined in the Securities Act (Ontario)) and forward-looking statements (as defined in the United States Securities Exchange Act of 1934) that are based on expectations, estimates and projections as of the date of the press release.

Generally, these forward-looking statements can be identified by the use of forward-looking terminology such as believe, potential, expect, forecast, estimate, would, could, if and may. Forward-looking statements and unknown risks, uncertainties and other factors which may cause actual results and developments to be materially different from any future results, performance or achievements expressed by, or implied by the forward-looking statements in this press release.

These forward looking statements are based on a number of assumptions which may prove to be incorrect, including but not limited to the various assumptions set forth in the Directors' Circular dated May 29, 2006 filed with the Canadian and U.S. regulators; assumptions in connection with both the proposed combination of Teck and Inco under the Teck Offer, and the proposed combination of Inco and Falconbridge under Inco's offer for the Falconbridge common shares, in respect of the results expected to be achieved from the combination of the entities, including calculating projected synergies and other benefits expected to be realized and the timing thereof.

In respect of these forward-looking statements, factors which could cause actual results to differ materially from current expectations regarding each of Inco, Teck and Falconbridge, include, but are not limited to, fluctuations in the prices of nickel and other primary metal products produced; fluctuations in asset values; the accuracy of ore reserve and mineral resource estimates; the accuracy of production, cost and cash costs per nickel unit projections; the successful development of mineral resources, completion of development projects, planned expansions or other projects; fluctuations in interest rates, exchange rates and demand and supply levels of nickel, copper and zinc; general economic conditions; competitive conditions; the outcome of pending legal proceedings; and changes to applicable laws, rules and regulations.

While Inco anticipates that subsequent events and developments may cause Inco's views to change, Inco specifically disclaims any obligation to update these forward-looking statements. These forward-looking statements should not be relied upon as representing Inco's views as of any date subsequent to the date of this press release.
