Elbit Systems Opens NASDAQ Trading

Haifa, Israel, March 13, 2008 –The management of Elbit Systems Ltd. (Nasdaq: ESLT), headed by the Chairman of the Board of Directors, Michael Federmann, the President and CEO, Joseph Ackerman, and the CFO, Joseph Gaspar, opened trading on NASDAQ yesterday at an opening bell ceremony. Also in attendance were NASDAQ executives.

The event took place a day after the company issued its 2007 financial results, highlighting Elbit Systems' continued growth and underscoring its position as a leading international defense electronics company.

The event was held at the NASDAQ MarketSite in New York City and was broadcast live on the external wall of the building overlooking Times Square. The Company's leading systems, including UAVs, helmet displays, thermal imaging cameras and others, were projected throughout the day on the Times Square display.

Following the ceremony, the management of Elbit Systems held meetings with investors and senior U.S. capital market executives.

Joseph Ackerman, President and CEO of Elbit Systems said "Opening the trading on NASDAQ is a significant event for the company. From its establishment in 1996, Elbit Systems has been listed on NASDAQ. Since then, along with becoming a multinational company with continuous growth, we have enjoyed the financial advantages of being traded on NASDAQ, which provides accessibility to the U.S. and the world's trading arenas."
