Item 4. Purpose of the Transaction

BlueLine invests in healthcare and technology companies that are undervalued, typically as a result of some negative news or event where investors have over-reacted and where the share price no longer reflects the Company's underlying fundamentals. As part of its investment strategy, BlueLine seeks to work with the management teams, boards of directors and other stakeholders of the companies in which it invests, in order to address issues affecting performance and valuation and thereby assist in the value creation process.

In the case of Angeion, BlueLine believes the market has been prone to overreactions. During fiscal year 2006, the Company's stock price rose from $5.00 per share to $18.00 per share presumably based upon revenue and earnings increases related to a single large clinical customer order. While that order was significant and for a time contributed a third of Angeion's revenue, it was understood to be a single order and investors were unwarranted in driving the price as high as they did. As business from the order declined and additional clinical orders failed to materialize, the Company's shares have plummeted. With a current share price below $6.00, Angeion now has a market capitalization of less than $25 million. Taking into account the Company's cash holdings of more than $7 million, the market is currently valuing Angeion's ongoing business at less than $20 million. This seems clearly wrong for a company whose core business is generating quarterly revenues of $7.0 million with 50% gross margins and positive cash-flow. BlueLine believes the market has grossly over-corrected the share price, and at current levels, Angeion represents compelling value.

BlueLine believes the Company's product line is competitive in its space, and that management's strategy is sound:

- continued focus on product innovation / enhancements in the core MedGraphics line of non-invasive cardiorespiratory diagnostic systems;

- increased emphasis on international distribution to tap largely under-penetrated markets overseas;

- invest in additional marketing programs, such as the new Physician Office Program to raise awareness of Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease (COPD), currently the fourth leading cause of death in the USA; and

- enabling multiple web-based applications for its product suites which will enable greater penetration into the physician office as well as the health and fitness (New Leaf) markets.

Operationally, BlueLine is encouraged by recent cost reductions that have lowered the company's breakeven point. In addition, we believe the hiring of a new CFO with public company experience has improved the Company's investor relations practices as evidenced by the recent first-ever quarterly investor earnings call.

An area where BlueLine believes Angeion still requires improvement is in setting and communicating policies around employee compensation. During fiscal year 2007, the Company's stockholders rejected a proposal to implement a large new employee stock option plan. Rather than heed the message that they were asking for too much, Angeion's management and board of directors pursued a work-around by pursuing smaller option shares increases in successive years. That strategy worked and the Company got most of the shares it wanted, but the message communicated to shareholders was that their interests would be subordinated to those of the Company's insiders. Having received this message, investors might reasonably be concerned about the 2008 Management Incentive Bonus Plan recently adopted by the Company and disclosed in an SEC filing. While BlueLine absolutely agrees with rewarding a management team for success, we believe the potential incentive payout of up to $1.1 million under the plan is out of proportion for a company that reported net income of $1.06 million in its last fiscal year and $1.44 million in the prior year. The large increases to the Company's option plan and the size of the 2008 Bonus Plan seem poorly timed in light of Angeion's recent stock performance. Together these actions communicate that considering the interests of stockholders is not currently a priority at the Company—a message that BlueLine believes has contributed to the recent stock price decline. This is one of the issues we plan to address with the Company.

Depending on market conditions, general economic conditions and other factors, BlueLine may purchase additional shares of Common Stock in the open market or in private transactions, or may dispose of all or a portion of the shares of Common Stock that it presently owns or may hereafter acquire.

Item 5. Interest in Securities of the Issuer
